Description: Home schooling is the education of children at home, typically by parents but sometimes by tutors, rather than in other formal settings of public or private school. Parents cite numerous reasons as motivations to home school, including better academic test results, poor public school environment, religious reasons, improved character/morality development, the expense of private education, and objections to what is taught locally in public school. It may be a factor in the choice of parenting style. Homeschooling is also an alternative for families living in isolated rural locations or living temporarily abroad.
