A project is something that has a clear beginning and end.

Someone can be held accountable to the framework of a project .

A project was either completed or it wasn't — and there are definable expectations that everyone can agree to.

This is imperative for every Crowd Funding project.

Crowd Funding is not a place for soliciting donations to causes, charity projects, or general business expenses.

Although with a little creativity & twist, these can get listed & funded as well..

All-or-nothing funding?

On the Kickstarter.com Every Crowd Funding project must be fully funded before its time expires or no money changes hands.

Why?

1. They feel It's less risk for everyone. If you need $5,000, it's tough having $2,000 and a bunch of people expecting you to complete a $5,000 project.
2. It allows people to test concepts (or conditionally sell stuff) without risk. If you don't receive the support you want, you're not compelled to follow through. This is huge!
3. It motivates. If people want to see a project come to life, they're going to spread the word and so will you.

Flexible Crowd Funding site?

On the Indiegogo.com Crowd Funding projects have a dual type of Profit system

1. Under the Flexible Funding option it pays this way:

You reach your goal – their take is 4%

You don't reach your Goal- their take is 9% but you get to keep what you earned

(This encourages you to PROMOTE your campaign).

2. Under the Fixed Funding option it pays this way:

You reach your goal – their take is 4%

You Don't reach your goals-You Get 0% and your contributors get refunded.
